The Cost of War, the Price of Peace:

Hard Questions About U.S. War in Afghanistan

Thursday, August 23 at 7:00 PM

First Universalist Church - 345 Broadway, Rockland

Drawing from recent experiences of living in Afghanistan for a month at a time, Kathy Kelly, (who returned from her eighth visit to Afghanistan in August 2012) will present perspectives of Afghan Peace Volunteers on prospects for their future in relation to NATO and the U.S. 21st century military.

Kathy and her companions at Voices for Creative Nonviolence have steadily researched consequences of drone attacks, night raids and aerial bombings in Afghanistan.

Through maps, photos and 3 minute videos, Kelly will consider some of the reasons why the U.S. government plans to continue U.S. military presence in Afghanistan until 2024 and beyond. She will also talk about responsible nonviolent resistance to U.S. warfare.
